Dreamboat Passes Halfway Mark On Trip

BIG ARMY PLANE STREAKS OVER MAGNETIC POLE

Arctic Non-Stop Flight Is Ahead Of Schedule Early Today

OTTAWA, Oct. 5.—The Pacusan Dreamboat streaked past the magnetic North Pole early today and headed for pond inlet on the eastern tip of Baffin land, the 4,715-mile point on its 10,300-mile non-stop flight from Honolulu to Cairo.

The plane was reported about an hour ahead of schedule.

However, nothing was heard from it after 4:45 a. m. EST and radio listeners said apparently its radio had been blacked out because of the Dreamboat's proximity to the magnetic pole. They said it might be several hours before the plane emerged from this "dead spot."

In its first 17 hours of flight, the plane averaged 253 miles an hour and its speed was increasing as its 13,000-gallon load of gasoline decreased.

The dreamboat was flying at 15,000 feet altitude and a radio report picked up at 4:45 a. m. said the crew was watching a "spectacular aurora borealis" indicating that the plane was flying in clear weather.

"Everything okay," said the terse report.

Previously the Dreamboat was believed heading into a blinding Arctic snowstorm, but a radio station on Arctic bay, Baffin land, said the plane, was skirting north to avoid the storm area.

The plane's course was approximately 100 miles north of the magnetic pole. The 10-man crew was encased in heavy, electrically-heated flying suits and battling temperatures of 17 degrees below zero.

Ahead stretched the bleak ice floes of Baffin bay before the plane reaches the west coast of Greenland, the last big hop across land before the ship reaches Europe.

The most hazardous part of the $3,000,000 experimental flight was believed over but U. S. Army, Coast Guard and Navy radio stations in Greenland, Labrador and Newfoundland were on the alert for any report from the big ship as it headed east for Reykjavik, Iceland, where it was due at noon EST.

Eskimos throughout the wastes of the frozen north also had been alerted to watch for the Dreamboat. They had been trained into a primitive war-time plane spotting corps by the Royal Canadian Mounted police. However, officials said their principle value would be

OPA TO APPEAL DECISION ON USING RECORDS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—The OPA said today it would appeal a federal district court decision holding that the sales record of a businessman cannot be used in OPA action against him if he claims immunity.

The decision was issued here yesterday in a case involving James Huffman, charged by OPA with selling used cars above ceiling prices. The court held use of his records would be the same as requiring him to testify against himself, a practice banned by the constitution.

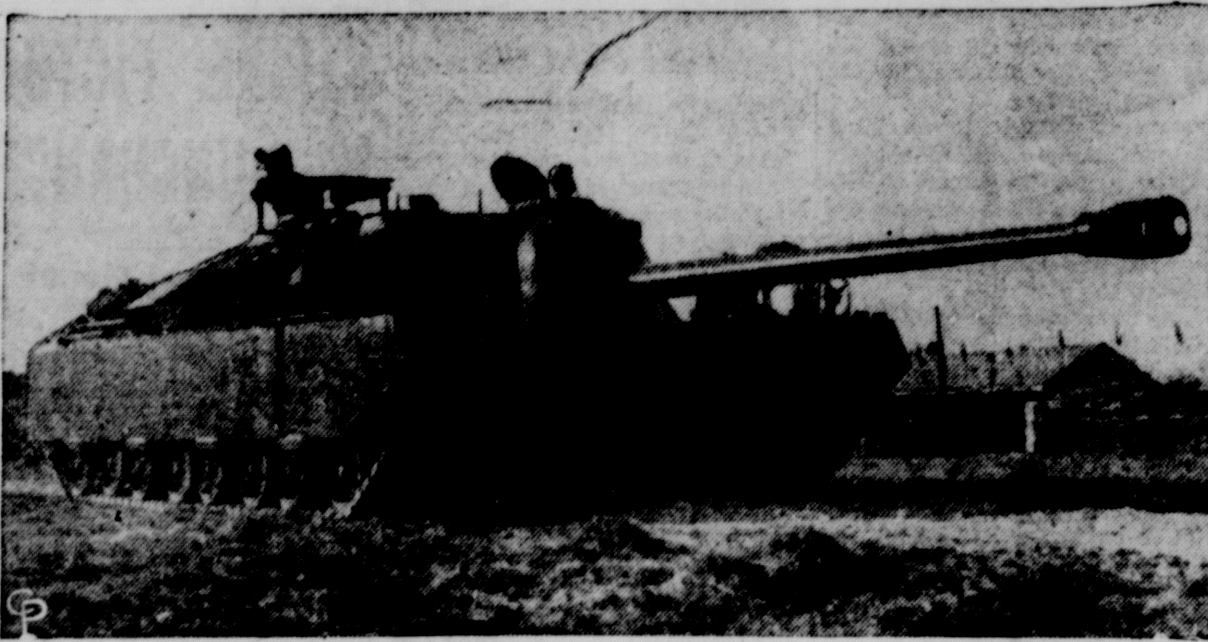

Frank S. Ketcham of the OPA general counsel's staff said the agency would appeal. Local OPA officials said the ruling would make enforcement of price regulations "considerably more difficult" if it were allowed to stand.

Ketcham pointed out that many other courts had upheld OPA's right to use dealers' records on grounds it was OPA that required the records to be kept.

A BATTLESHIP ON LAND IS ARMY'S HEAVIEST TANK

THE SUPER HEAVY T28, weighing nearly 100 tons, is biggest tank yet built by the ordnance department. Shown at the 28th annual meeting of the Army Ordnance Association at Aberdeen, Md., the land battleship mounts a 105-mm. gun and is heavily armored for close range assault operations. With two sets of tracks on each side, it was originally designed in the belief it was needed to crack the German west wall.

U. S. PREVENTS ARREST PLANS

Schacht And Fritzsche Are Released; Arrest By Germans Blocked

NUERNBERG, Oct. 5.—The U. S. military government ended an 11-hour argument with German police today by releasing Hjalmar Schacht and Hans Fritzsche from American house arrest and promising them protection from re-arrest by German authorities.

Schacht and Fritzsche were told they were free to leave the separate Nuernberg apartments in which they had been barricaded since their secret departure from the Nuernberg prison last night. They cannot be arrested by any German authority "until further notice."

Telephoned orders from Brig. Gen. Walzer J. Mueller, American military governor of Bavaria, in early afternoon cancelled the American house arrest under which the two acquitted German leaders had been placed while military government authorities weighed the right of German police to re-arrest them on de-nazification warrants.

Schacht and Fritzsche were told they would be assigned American military police escorts for trips around Nuernberg if they desired. Restrictions on their movements were lifted.

Until Mueller's order arrived, the two men were barricaded in their apartment buildings by American police. German police stood guard by the Americans, seeking to arrest the men if they came out, while the Americans refused to permit them to come out.

Fritzsche sought to leave his apartment and surrender to the Germans, but was forbidden by the Americans to do so.

Herman Goering, Joachim von Ribbentrop and seven other convicted men filed appeals to the control council shortly before the deadline. This raised the total of appeals to 16.

In Berlin, a British spokesman for Lt. Gen. Sir Brian Robertson said entry applications to the British zone from Schacht, Fritzsche or Franz von Papen would be denied. He added that none had been received.

PROBERS PLAN FULL WEEK OF W A A HEARINGS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—The house surplus property investigating committee today planned another full week of hearings to see if something can be done to speed disposal of war surplus material.

Committee Counsel Hugh Wise said he was not ready to say who would testify next week, but indicated they would be government representatives. The hearings will resume Tuesday.

The war assets administration, charged with disposing of government surplus, was strongly denounced and defended during testimony of the first score or so witnesses.

Aviation Corporation Takes Over 3 Companies

Plans of the Aviation Corporation of America, owner of the Circleville factory operated under the name of the Horton Manufacturing Division, to acquire the assets and businesses of three associated companies, the Crosley Corporation, New Idea, Inc., and American Central Manufacturing Corporation, were approved by the directors of each company at meetings held Friday at New York City.

This announcement, Saturday, by Victor Emanuel, chairman of the board of directors of the Aviation Corporation of America, said that the company now owns approximately 90 per cent of the outstanding capital stock of the Crosley Corporation, 90 per cent of the stock of the New Idea, Inc., and 61 per cent of the stock of the American Central Manufacturing Corporation.

Under the plans the minority stockholders in each of the three companies will receive shares of common stock of the Aviation Corporation of America in the ratio of four shares for each share of Crosley, three and one-half shares for each share of New Idea, and two and one-eighth shares for each share of American Central.

Stockholders of the three corporations will be asked to approve the recommendation of their respective board of directors at special meetings to be held during November.

Consolidation of the three companies with the Aviation Corporation of America is aimed to result in greater operating efficiency, economies in corporate expenses, and a greater diversification for the minority stockholders of each associated company.

Emanuel said the Aviation Cor-

SADIST BURNS, SLASHES YOUNG CHICAGO MOTHER

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—A 24-year-old mother who is expecting another child was attacked early today by an apparent sadist who bound her hands and feet, ripped off her clothing, slashed her breasts and body with a razor blade and burned her with a cigarette.

Mrs. Thelma Breen, mother of two small children, told police she was attacked while returning from a late movie. A man about 25 years old dressed in an Army jacket and trousers confronted her with a pistol, she said, and forced her into a backyard near her home. "I'm going to rape you," he said. Then he bound her and with a razor blade slashed off her clothing, and cut her repeatedly on the breasts and body.

"I'm sorry I have to do this," he told her.

Then he lit a cigarette and burned her breast. "You're a pretty bloody mess," he said. "So I guess I'll have to leave you."

Mrs. Breen, near collapse and hysteria, loosened her bounds and crawled up the back stairs to a second floor apartment. The occupant, Lawrence Fitzgerald, took her to a hospital where surgeons sewed eight stitches in her left breast, and treated her other cuts and burns.

STRIKE PICTURE IS UNCHANGED

683,500 Workers Idle; Hope For Settlement Of Labor Troubles Dim

By United Press
Top government officials reported progress today in attempts to settle the nationwide shipping strike but the number of workers idle in labor disputes across the country rose to 683,500.

At Pittsburgh, streetcar motorists voted down a back-to-work proposal and the city's power strike, in its 12th day, appeared no nearer settlement.

Strikes continued in the motion picture industry at Hollywood, among transportation workers at Columbus, O., and Chicago.

The major developments:

1. Government attempts to end the maritime tie-up were intensified as west coast shipowners were reported retreating in their fight against union security.

2. The U. S. employment service's Pittsburgh office was swamped with applicants for jobless pay as the number of workers made idle by the power strike rose to 125,000.

3. Rep. John S. Wood, D., Ga., chairman of the house Un-American activities committee, arrived in Hollywood to begin an investigation of the movie strike to determine if it was "inspired by subversive groups."

Of the 683,500 idle workers across the nation, only 112,650 were involved directly in walk-outs. The rest were unemployed as the result of labor disputes. The shipping strike alone made 500,000 idle.

Vice Adm. Willard Ward Smith, chairman of the maritime commission said he "understood" that

PEACE CONFAB NEARING FULL SESSIONS NOW

Commission Work Winds Up With Fixing Of Bulgarian Reparations Total

PARIS, Oct. 5.—The peace conference wound up its commission work today when the Balkan economic commission voted after a 28-hour session to fix Bulgarian reparations at $125,000,000 in a parliamentary victory for the Anglo-Americans who outlast the eastern bloc.

Racing against today's deadline for reporting to the full conference, the Balkan commission adjourned at 2:45 p. m. (5:45 a. m. EST). It had been in session since yesterday morning, with only the briefest recesses.

The session of the commission, the last to finish its work, broke all recent records for such a body by sitting through a night and a day.

Andre Vishinsky, Soviet vice foreign minister, told the Italian political commission that the entire Soviet Union was behind the recent words of Premier Josef Stalin in a desire for peace.

Sen. Tom Connally, D., Tex., joined Vishinsky in a peace utterance. In one of his now famous oratorical presentations, Connally thundered that "we must not, can not have another war."

Vishinsky was in a mellow mood at the 43rd and final session of the Italian political commission. He made a lyric speech extolling the virtues of the commission. And veered into a vein of gravity when he promised Soviet cooperation in world affairs.

"We have had our differences in this commission," Vishinsky said. "We know we are divided in our political understanding. We do not react in the same way to events which are happening in the world."

"The Soviet Union, however, stands behind the recent words of our great Generalissimo Stalin and the Soviet delegation is determined to consolidate the work of this conference, so necessary, however different our views."

Connally followed him, emphasizing with flailing arms his denunciation of the possibility of another war.

"There are some who already are talking of such a possibility," he said. "I cannot believe men have lost their reason and nations have reached a point where they are so forgetful of humanity that they want again to see the hands of the peoples of the world dripping with blood."

"We have undertaken to construct peace, and once constructed, to maintain it. We cannot preserve world peace without cooperation. It is unthinkable that we should talk now about another war."

LEGION BACKS WAR TRAINING, BLASTS BRADLEY

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 5.—Thousands of American Legion national convention delegates were on their way home today with their new national commander, Paul H. Griffith, Uniontown, Pa., empowered to seek a program for "full preparedness" including compulsory military training.

The 28th annual convention closed week-long sessions yesterday with more criticism of Gen. Omar Bradley, head of the veterans administration, and a statement favoring a four-month period of military training in contrast to the war department's recommendation for six months.

The 10-point preparedness program also called for a unified command of the armed forces, keeping of atomic bomb secrets and a full investigation of "excessive war profits."

Griffith, 49-year-old veteran of World Wars I and II, pledged he would carry on the policies of his predecessor, John Stelle of Illinois. He drew resounding applause with a parting shot at Gen. Bradley, asserting he would carry on the Legion's efforts to obtain repeal of the $175 and $200 a month ceilings over the "on-the-job" training of World War II veterans.

British, Arabs Protest Truman Plan For Jews

BY LYLE C. WILSON

United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—President Truman's Yom Kippur plea for entry of Jews into Palestine embittered the controversy today but failed to budget the barriers against immigration.

British government and Arab spokesmen sharply protested the President's statement. It was made public at the White House on the day upon which begins the Jewish fast of atonement. Jewish reaction was favorable but showed an inclination to wait for results.

There was the inevitable speculation here as to the extent to which the statement was designed either for world consideration or as a powerful election campaign re-statement of administration policy. Congressional and local elections take place on Nov. 5. The Jewish vote is a vital factor in those elections. That is especially true in New York state where polls and political observers forecast Democratic reverses this year.

Mr. Truman's statement reviewed his effort to open Palestine to Jewish immigration. He proposed immediate substantial entry of Jews into Palestine pending permanent adjustment of the problem. He said he would seek amendment of United States immigration laws, if other countries would act similarly, to permit additional refugees to come here.

A spokesman for British Prime Minister Clement Attlee replied that the statement was very unfortunate and might well jeopardize the relief of Jewish refugees. He revealed that Attlee had received the statement from Mr. Truman Thursday and immediately requested that it be held up pending further consultations.

There was no effort to mask the fact that the British prime minister was annoyed by Mr. Truman's action. Representatives here of Arab states were even more bitter.

The Arab office here said, in part:

"The statement will certainly have a very serious effect on the

AMERICANS HELD BY YUGOSLAVIA TO BE RELEASED

BELGRADE, Oct. 5.—An authoritative source said today that Robert Burnup, an UNRRA construction engineer from Independence, Mo., soon will be released by Yugoslav authorities and returned to the United States after a week's imprisonment on espionage charges.

Burnup was accused of gathering information about the strength and disposition of the Yugoslav army, the source said.

Yugoslav authorities handed the UNRRA headquarters in Belgrade a full report on the case and gave assurances that he will be released as soon as formalities are completed, it was stated. The Yugoslav government insisted that he must leave the country immediately upon his release.

attitude of Arab and Moslem peoples toward America. By its complete disregard of Arab opinion, which by now must be well known to the President, the statement will certainly complicate the problem of Palestine and do nothing toward solving it."

A Jewish agency spokesman here said the agency welcomed the statement and hoped for "practical steps" to make it effective.

GROUND FORCES TO TAKE TO AIR

Plans To Make All U. S. Army Ground Forces Airborne Are Revealed

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—The Army, gearing its operations to ever-increasing speed, is planning to make all ground forces entirely airborne, it was revealed today.

The disclosure was made by the Brig. Gen. William M. Milley, commander of the airborne school at Fort Benning, Ga., in an article in the AAF Review, official air force publication.

Milley said ordnance equipment was being redesigned to fit aircraft loading requirements and that giant air transports were being designed.

The key vehicle in the airborne army will be the C-82 Fairchild Packet known as the "flying box car." This plane is capable of carrying a 155 MM cannon or an Army two and one-half ton truck. The Packet can seat 50 sky soldiers. Only 11,000 of these planes could transport an entire infantry division and all its equipment.

Other air transports being developed are:

1. The C-97 Stratocruiser, a double-decked cargo version of the Boeing B-29 that will carry 20,000 pounds of equipment or 142 men thousands of miles.

2. The C-84 Douglas Globe-master, capable of carrying 125 troops or 49,000 pounds of air transportable equipment.

3. The C-99 cargo version of the XB36, world's largest bombing plane, now coming off the assembly line. This plane is capable of carrying 75,000 pounds of equipment or over 300 troops. It could carry 10,000 pounds of equipment 10,000 miles.

LITTLE MEAT BEFORE FALL OF 1947 EXPECTED

Agriculture Department Asks 13 Percent Increase In Spring Pig Goal

MORE BEEF NEXT YEAR

Mutton And Lamb Supplies May Be Smaller In '47; Subsidies Set

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—The agriculture department today urged the nation's farmers to produce 58,000,000 pigs next Spring as insurance against another meat shortage next year.

The Spring goal is approximately 13 per cent larger than last Spring's actual production of 52,404,000 pigs, but the agriculture department emphasized that the crop would not be reflected in larger pork and lamb supplies before the last three months of 1947.

At the same time, Sen. James M. Mead, D., N. Y., called for a congressional investigation to determine if present meat regulations were giving chain stores an advantage over small independent retailers.

"There is a serious question in my mind whether a conspiracy exists on the part of big business to prevent meat from reaching the small independent stores," he told the senate small business committee.

Prices To Stay Up

In announcing the new Spring pig goals, the agriculture department also established new pig support prices for the year ending Oct. 1, 1947. But with demand for meat as strong as it is, it saw little chance hog prices will fall that low even without government buying.

Officials said an important factor in the decision to hike pig goals next Spring is that mutton and lamb supplies are expected to be much smaller in both 1947 and 1948 as a result of labor shortages and a smaller number of ewes.

"Production of beef and veal in 1947 may be larger than in 1946 but some decrease is probable by 1948," they added. "On the other hand, consumer buying power is expected to continue at a high level with a consequent strong demand for meat."

More Meat in Late 1947

"Fulfillment of the goal, with marketing at weights about equal to those of the past couple of years, would help to increase total 1947 and 1948 meat production. Particularly it would provide a larger supply in the fourth quarter of 1947."

The Spring goals are about twice as large as last Fall's goal of 31,500,000. That goal was set at a time when the administration was trying to discourage the feeding of livestock to free grain for deficit areas abroad.

RESTAURANTS TO CHARGE MORE BY ORDER OF OPA

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Patrons of hamburger stands, steak houses and other restaurants had ample reason today to sigh and say that bad news comes in bunches.

It wasn't enough that OPA authorized all restaurants, effective next Thursday, to raise the prices of all meat dishes by 15 per cent. But to top it off, OPA officials said prices of poultry, fish and egg dishes also are going up soon.

And the restaurant industry, not entirely satisfied with increases granted by OPA, is going ahead with plans to petition for immediate decontrol of all restaurant prices.

The 15 per cent meat price boost authorized by OPA applies to all eating places, from hamburger joints on, it covers all meals in which meat is the major ingredient.

On meat dishes selling above 20 cents, the increase will be rounded out to the nearest nickel. On hamburger sandwiches and other meat items selling under 20 cents now, the increase will be rounded out to the nearest cent.

OPA authorized the 15 per cent boost in a retreat from its Sept. 17 order rolling back restaurant meat prices 10 per cent to June 30 of $14.25 a hundred, Chicago basis, compared with the present ceiling of $16.25 and a support level of $13. The seasonal variation ranges from $12.75 in December to $15.75 in September.

The department conceded this support will not apply to the majority of pigs produced next Spring, because most of them will not reach market until the last quarter. New support prices will be fixed then on the basis of parity.

Cabinet Studies Problem
Meanwhile, the meat shortage remained one of the administration's biggest headaches. President Truman and his cabinet discussed it at length yesterday.

Some government officials feel it may prove futile to try to keep meat ceilings where they are while such substitutes as eggs, butter, cheese and poultry remain uncontrolled and bring record prices.

They feel meat prices either must be raised or decontrolled, or that dairy products, poultry and fish should be brought back under control.

POULTRY MOVES OUT RAPIDLY IN SEPTEMBER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5—American housewives, unable to get beef and pork, dug deeply into the nation's stocks of fresh and frozen poultry in September.

The agriculture department said today that contrary to the usual trend in September when poultry usually is sent into storage, there were heavy net withdrawals.

"During the four weeks ended Sept. 28," it said, "storage stocks in 35 cities declined 20,000,000 pounds compared with an increase of 28,000,000 pounds last year."

Live poultry prices in the eastern and southern areas jumped 11 to 12 cents a pound during the first three weeks of September as a result of the abnormal demand. Heavy poultry was selling at 55 cents a pound and young birds at 60 cents.

Receipts of live poultry at the four principal markets were up 60 per cent over the same period a year ago and almost double the previous month.

OPA OFFICIALS WARN DEALERS ON OVERDRAFTS

CINCINNATI, Oct. 5—An OPA official warned here today that approximately 100 sugar wholesalers and retailers in the Cincinnati OPA district (which includes Pickaway county) faced loss of sugar ration bank accounts because of overdrafts.

Jacob Neumann, head of the sugar rationing section, said it was expected 70 per cent of the dealers would make up the deficit, which resulted from failure to deposit ration stamps.

Neumann said the sugar shortage in stores had eased, and blamed it on strikes by longshoremen and eastern refinery workers, and on the freight car shortage.

OPA STUDIES INCENTIVE PLAN FOR FAT SAVING

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5—A can of grease, Mrs. Housewife, may give you priority on a box of soap chips.

The department of agriculture and OPA are giving serious study to suggestion by a number of housewives that they would save more waste fats if given an incentive.

And in these days, priority on a box of soap chips is a pretty powerful incentive.

The latest suggestion was put forward by Mrs. Edward J. Chicco of Washington. She noticed that a lot of women were not saving fat because they felt the four cents a pound their butcher gave them wasn't worth the effort. But if their butchers could assure them the sale of a box of soap, she said, the waste fat would come rolling in.

Officials saw one weakness to the suggestion—what about the people who "eat out" and also need soap for their small washes. No solution has been found as yet to this problem, according to OPA and agriculture.

BIG ARMY PLANE STREAKS OVER MAGNETIC POLE

in locating the plane in case of a crash.

At 3 a. m. EST, the Dreamboat reported to Kodiak radio it was 150 miles past Coppermine over Coronation gulf and was heading across the Victoria island.

At 2 a. m. EST, Col. C. W. Irvine, commander of the 74-ton plane, reported to the Canadian department of transport's radio station at Edmonton, Alta., that they were crossing Great Bear lake on the fringe of the Arctic circle.

"All okay," the terse message said. Irvine added that the ship was on schedule.

Great Bear lake is about 200 miles from Coppermine in the northwest territory.

Listeners probed a crackling curtain of static to keep contact with the plane. Radiomen at Edmonton said the numerous ham operators attempting to keep in contact with the plane were contributing to the static.

Radio interference increased as the plane neared the magnetic pole, and authorities said it might not clear until the ship neared the coast of Greenland, 1,400 miles east.

Reykjavik is the halfway point of the flight and if its rate of speed is maintained, it should be in Cairo at noon Sunday. However, as its gasoline load lightened, the plane was expected to increase its speed.

(The Royal Air Force station at Uxbridge, London, said the Dreamboat was expected over Northolt airfield near London between 5 and 6 p. m. EST.)

The aerial giant took off from Hickam field, Honolulu, at 11:21 a. m. EST yesterday on the grueling flight designed to test men and equipment in the toughest weather in the world.

It made Sitka, 2,745 miles from Hickam field, at 10:49 p. m. EST, and then soared to 15,000 feet to leap over the 12,000-foot high jagged peaks of the Mackenzie mountain range.

When the plane approached Alaska, an Army weather plane took off to scout conditions across the Mackenzie range. It preceded the Dreamboat as far east as Coppermine when it was forced to turn back because its gasoline supply was running out.

The plane crossed the Alaskan-Canadian border at 11:50 p. m. EST and an hour and 20 minutes later the crew donned oxygen masks for the hop over the mountains.

The flight is the Army's $3,000,000 experiment to test Polar flying conditions. It originally had been planned to set a new non-stop record, but the Navy's Truculent Turtle did that last week when it flew 11,236 miles from Perth, Australia, to Columbus, O. However, if the Dreamboat's gasoline holds out, it was expected to try to extend its flight past Cairo as far as possible.

The plane's route is across London, France, Foggia, Italy, then across the Mediterranean to Cairo, avoiding Yugoslavia and Trieste.

The most hazardous part of the journey was over the Arctic where the nights at this time of the year are 10 hours long and it snows almost constantly. The crew also was careful to avoid Russian territory.

The plane was specially equipped for the flight and had waited at Hickam field for 34 days for the best possible weather for the journey.

When it took off the plane carried 25 copies of the Honolulu Advertiser with front page greetings to King Farouk of Egypt.

In addition to Col. Irvine, St. Paul, Neb., the crew members are Col. Beverly Warren, Omaha, Neb., co-pilot; Maj. N. P. Hays, Seneca, Mo., and Maj. J. T. Brothers, Knoxville, Tenn., navigators; Maj. J. R. Dale, Wise, Va., and R. B. Snodgrass, civilian technician, Seattle, Wash., flight engineer; Lt. Col. F. J. Shannon, Philadelphia, and M. Sgt. E. G. Vasse, Huntsville, Mo., radio operators; Maj. the court had received no communications from the Vatican with regard to the sentences. However, Dr. Alfred Seidl, attorney for Hans Frank, claimed that Michael Cardinal Faulhaber of Munich had sent the Allied control council an appeal for mercy for Frank on behalf of Pope Pius XII.

Attorneys for Frau Luise Jodl, wife of Col. Gen. Alfred Jodl, said she had received special permission from American army authorities to address an appeal for clemency to President Truman.

Fritzsche conferred with military government officers and the Nuernberg police chief and decided to give himself up to German authorities for denazification proceedings. He will surrender either today or tomorrow but will remain at liberty until his case comes up for hearing.

A. J. Rockwell, head of the American military government legal division in Berlin, said the acquitted trio would have to register under the denazification laws just like any other German adults.

Aviation Corporation Takes Over 3 Companies

distribution", Emanuel pointed out. "The companies will complement each other inasmuch as there are no serious competitive conditions obtaining in the production and sale of their respective products."

Emanuel explained that the three subsidiary companies being merged with the Aviation Corporation will function as divisions of AVCO. They will continue to operate as they have in the past with the same personnel, and will follow the same policies and practices.

The present four divisions and wholly-owned subsidiaries of AVCO are engaged in the manufacture of aircraft engines at Lycoming, residential and commercial heating unit at Spencer Heater, Williamsport, Pa., automatic garage door operators at Horton Manufacturing, Circleville, Ohio, precision aircraft parts at Republic Aircraft Products, Detroit, Mich.; and machine tool and dies at American Propeller Corporation, Toledo.

The Toledo concern will become the Avco Tool and Machine Division, Emanuel said. In addition to the interests involved in the proposed consolidation, he asserted, AVCO has investments in Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corporation, New York Shipbuilding Corporation, American Airlines, Inc., Pan-American Airways Corporation, Roosevelt Field, Inc., and Frozen Products, Inc.

The huge merger expected to result from Friday's meetings at New York City will have the effect of strengthening the financial setup of the Aviation Corporation, owners of the Horton Manufacturing Division in Circleville.

The Circleville plant is producing a unique type of garage door-opener. The floor space of the Circleville plant has been increased by 5,000 square feet since the plant was purchased last March from the Silex at public auction for $70,000. The factory is located at Clinton street and Half avenue and is a one-story hollow brick structure erected in 1926 on a 2.14 acre site. Before the enlargement the building had approximately 25,000 square feet of floor space. It has sprinkler system and facilities include a railroad siding.

Since the plant was bought at auction seven months ago the U-shaped building has been substantially improved by removing inside walls and installing a new roof to transform the factory into a non-U-shaped building.

The garage door-opening device and appurtenances enable a motorist to drive up to his garage, press a button within the car, and the garage door opens automatically. At the same time the garage is lighted. Leaving the garage the motorist merely presses another button within the house, and the garage door closes and the lights are extinguished. The device is operated by electrical impulse.

west coast shipowners were ready to grant preferential hiring and maintenance of union membership on a partial basis. These "union security" issues have been the chief obstacles to settlement of the maritime strike.

On the west coast, however, President Harry Bridges of the CIO longshoremen's union, executed a direct about face. After offering to order 23,000 striking longshoremen back to work, Bridges announced that the walk-out would not end until settlement of a minor issue.

Previously, he had offered to leave to further negotiations the question of whether longshoremen or sailors should unload 16 steam schooners at remote west coast ports.

At a turbulent mass meeting in Pittsburgh last night, members of the AFL streetcar operators' union rebelled against international representative Patrick J. O'Brien, who urged them to return to their jobs. The streetcar employees have refused to cross picket lines of striking power workers.

STOLEN AUTO RECOVERED AT WASHINGTON C. H.

Charles Maley, 23, Springfield, was arrested Friday night at Washington C. H. in possession of the stolen automobile of Dr. G. D. Sheets, Williamsport. The car disappeared from its parking place Wednesday night at Williamsport. Sheriff Charles Radcliff said Dr. Sheets would accompany deputies Saturday afternoon to Washington C. H., to recover the machine and to remove Maley to the county jail in Circleville.

MEAT AND GRAIN

CERTAIN mid-western farm groups are saying there is more than a meat shortage in the meat famine. It goes back to grain. High prices brought grain out of storage to be shipped abroad for relief programs. Grain reserves were depleted which even the present bountiful harvest has not yet restocked. This reduced the normal supply of meat animals. In addition, heavy inroads were made in marketable live stock during the meat price-lifting of July and August.

It takes time to fatten grazing cattle—time and grain. If meat ceilings were lifted now, there would be only a temporary supply of meat. This is said to be the real reason why President Truman and Democratic chairman Hannegan have reached an agreement to keep OPA meat prices.

The average voter doesn't think about all this. He knows that his digestion has been interfered with. He will put up with a lot. But he wants to eat as he pleases. Come November he will probably express his resentment.

Whatever the administration does in the next two or three weeks will be ascribed to politics. It is too late for any other point of view. Those with any power to change conditions had better take a long look and do the best they can, without respect to political considerations, to alleviate food shortages for all the people for the next year or two.

Canada has plenty of food, including meat and dairy products, for all its people, in spite of having recently sent 42,000 tons of hams and bacon and other products overseas. Our powers of production are greater. Why must we do without?

CURE BUT NOT CAUSE

NOT a single case of poliomyelitis can be prevented, but 75 percent of the afflicted can be cured. Despite 40 years of medical research, the agent carrying the polio virus has not been found, according to Roland Berg, staff member of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. But such strides have been made in treatment that three out of every four cases recover with no handicaps.

The great mystery of cause in this disease remains unlocked, but it is a great human boon that the cure is so well in hand.

CODDLING 'EM

IT'S a little hard for the public to believe, but a railroad actually has changed a schedule to suit the convenience of its riders! The Pennsylvania system advertises pushing forward the departure time of a through New York-Chicago train so business men won't have to interrupt their work in the afternoon to take it.

After passengers have been trained all these years to think time tables were made up to suit train dispatchers, this is indeed a pleasant shock.

Inside WASHINGTON

Wallace and Pepper Teamed ..... Lucky Acheson Vacationing
At '48 Demo Convention? ..... Missed Fireworks on Speech

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Political observers in Washington are fairly certain that Henry A. Wallace, fired by President Truman as secretary of commerce, plans no third party movement in 1948. Wallace has repeatedly warned against a third party, which he considers futile, and there is no reason to believe that the Iowa has changed his mind.

The present Wallace long-range strategy leads to the Democratic convention arena two years hence. It is there that Wallace will attempt to resolve his feud with the President.

Wallace, backed by the PAC and other "liberal" elements, will undoubtedly seek the Democratic presidential nomination. His running mate probably will be Senator Claude Pepper (D) of Florida.

Observers point out that much depends on the outcome of the international situation—the point at which the former commerce secretary split with the Truman administration. If all is not well, if the Truman-Byrnes policy seems to have failed, then Wallace figures his chances are strong to capture the nomination.

Pepper, on the other hand, would not mind trying to split the party now. The "left wing" Floridian already has expressed a choice for Wallace and has indicated that he would not mind being a vice-presidential candidate.

WHATEVER THE RESULTS of the Truman-Wallace blow-up, Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson can be thankful for a propitious vacation that carried him out of Washington during the tumultuous days before Wallace was severed from the administration. When Acheson, three weeks ago, announced that he was off on a return trip to the Canadian wilds, he had no inkling that Wallace

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5 — The crisis in Democratic politics brought the Chicago boss Ed Kelly down to Washington for three days, ostensibly to see something here about his airport, but actually to try to get Messrs. Truman and Hannegan out of the glue barrel into which they had hopped gracefully with Mr. Wallace and from which they extricated themselves ungracefully, leaving Mr. Wallace therein.

Mr. Kelly went back to Chicago with the official sub-rosa Democratic story that after all, you know, it is possible Messrs. Truman and Hannegan may have planned this exploit in a glue barrel just to get rid of the commerce secretary. This is quite a tall story, one of the highest, if not the soundest, of the campaign thus far, but it was accepted without a grimace in some quarters, where certain Demos were glad to be relieved of the Wallace burden.

In such ways, the leaders have managed to make themselves somewhat happy about all this.

For this or other reasons, their confidential figures on the election show they expect to lose a few more seats in the house but are convinced they can retain the majority. They cannot afford to lose many as they are only 21 above a majority, (plurality 47). The latest house lineup shows 239 Democrats, 192 Republicans and 4 others. The Republicans must gain 24 seats to win a plurality. A few Democratic senators have likewise been checked off as beyond rescue, but the average conclusion of the high command is they will be able to rescue their congress from the electorate with only some shavings missing.

Their technique of political exploitation is running just about the same as the old Roosevelt sure-thing election tactics. At bedrock, it is simply an alliance between the unions and the city machines. The question has been whether the unions would go along this time as in Roosevelt days. Demo bosses who have talked with Phil Murray, president of CIO, say it is a certainty they will; and that his leftwing branch of the unions will join in as usual on election day, no matter how far they have strayed from the political banner of the administration, or indeed how much they have tried to tear it down during the recent strikes. Now I do not guarantee this. I am merely reporting the confident expectations of the Truman strategists. Naturally if they get all the unions back into their camp, they can stage what might be described as a pre-war Roosevelt election, but personally I am far from convinced that the unions will come around for them in a group as usual, and I have in mind particularly the new antagonism of the railroad brotherhoods and the CIO economists. Not until returns from the union districts are available, the day after election, can anyone be convinced, in the face of such recent evidence to the contrary as the defeat of good labor friends like Wheeler and La Follette in the primaries. Certainly bits of electoral evidence thus far have suggested the unions are not subject to one-horse leading.

planned to sound off on foreign policy. Indeed, the famous Madison Square Garden speech had not been written, and Mr. Truman was just returning from Bermuda.

At the end of a two-weeks' holiday—his first since 1939—rumor says Acheson started back to civilization fully rested and ready for anything.

But when the undersecretary reached the city, took one look at the newspapers carrying the hue and cry raised by the Wallace incident, he, like a true diplomat, turned back for more fishing.

Whether these reports are true or not, it can safely be said that Acheson is not sorry for having been absent from the Washington scene during development of the Truman-Wallace schism.

IF YOU THINK THE PRESENT MEAT SHORTAGE is bad, wait until next spring and early summer.

No less a person than Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson predicts that the situation will be much worse by the second quarter of 1947.

Anderson thinks that next spring Americans will have about 116 pounds of meat per person. This is near the per capita consumption during the worst food shortage days of the war.

In event this sad plight comes to pass, Anderson is the person empowered under the price control law to do something about it.

Some quarters are certain that if meat production falls off seriously or fails to pick up by next spring Anderson is almost sure to recommend a price increase.

MEANWHILE, REP. SABATH (D) of Illinois, one of the oldest House members in point of service, predicted that one of the first tasks facing Congress when it convenes in January will be to revise the OPA law.

Sabath charged that the present law is "too weak" and asserted that the public will demand a stronger statute to "prevent runaway prices."

Sabath's prediction is made against a background of rapidly rising prices, despite restoration of price controls. The Bureau of Labor Statistics announced that the price of food has gone up 31.3 percent since June 30, when the old price control law expired.

Diagnosing Heart Disease

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

THE physician of an earlier era had little to help him in making a diagnosis of heart disease. He could listen to the sounds made by the suspected heart and then, by tapping with his finger over the heart area, determine to some degree how large the heart was. Other than this he had only the patient's account of symptoms and his own observant eye to guide him.

Modern science has changed all this. Today's physicians will not, to be sure, neglect these time-honored methods, but, in addition, they have many other ways of confirming their diagnosis. It may be that an electrical tracing of the heart beat, or electrocardiogram will be helpful. If so, the means is at hand to make it.

X-Ray Revealing

Or perhaps the X-ray will reveal just the one more fact it is so necessary to have in order to get a complete picture of the patient's condition.

According to Dr. John F. Holt, of Michigan, X-ray has become increasingly important in the study of abnormal conditions of the heart, and particularly in determining when the heart has been damaged by the disorder known as rheumatic fever, since in this disease the heart is often enlarged.

There are a number of X-ray methods that are used to determine the heart size. First there is fluoroscopy. This makes it possible to see the shadow of the heart on a screen. The doctor can notice any abnormal beating of the heart, and any changes of the heart movement during breathing. It is also possible to study the position of the heart in its relationship to the surrounding structures and tell whether it is enlarged. A second method is called orthodiagraphy. This method also uses the fluoroscope, but by employing a particular type of X-ray beam, it is possible to obtain a tracing of the heart outline. This outline can be transferred directly to a sheet of paper and serves as a permanent record of the size of the heart.

Another Method

Still another method is the use of what is called a teleroentgenogram. This is an X-ray plate taken with the source of the X-ray at least six feet from the heart. Such X-ray plates give an accurate picture of the size and shape of the heart.

Not all heart disorders will cause changes that are visible in the X-ray. However, if there is a suspicion that heart disease is present, X-ray evidence of heart enlargement serves to support the suspicion.

In other words, X-ray examination of the heart gives confirmatory evidence of heart damage. Thus, frequently in rheumatic fever, it will be found that the left upper part of the heart is enlarged due to damage to one of the heart valves.

Persons who have heart disturbances might well have a careful X-ray examination made.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

BEFORE THEY left, Sunday evening, Wallace took Barry into his library. He said, "Sit down, Barry. I want to talk to you."

He pushed an inside-silver cigarette box across the desk and regarded his son-in-law. He said, "I think I owe you an apology."

"Why?" asked Barry, warily.

Wallace said thoughtfully, "On the other hand, I doubt if any sane man could contemplate calmly so hasty a marriage as yours and Abby's. So I don't owe you an apology for my original objection."

But I would like to say that I have revised my opinion of you. I have made— he paused slightly—"inquiries. It seems that you are serious about a career in politics."

Barry said hastily, "I'd hardly call it that, sir."

"Well, whatever you call it . . . it is," he added, "in its way, quite admirable, although I belong to the reactionary school, which holds that gentlemen are rarely politicians or, shall we say, the other way around?"

Barry said, annoyed, "I'm afraid I can't agree with you. It depends of course, on what your definition of a gentleman is. But by any standards, I could cite some notable names."

Wallace smiled. He said, "Suppose we don't argue the point. I personally do not belong to any party, and upon the occasions when I have voted I have exercised the right of choice."

"Fair enough," said Barry, wondering how Wallace managed to keep an apparently inexhaustible supply of his custom-made, rather heavy cigarette.

"When I have given funds," said Wallace, "to either party, it has been because at the time I preferred one to the other. From all your mother tells me— she stopped and added mildly—"she is a very articulate woman—your particular interest lies in reform . . . and your party affiliation is more or less a matter of convenience. In other words, you have to work through or with an organization machine."

Barry raised his eyebrows. "You put it," he murmured, "neatly."

"I'm not interested," said Wallace, "in reform. I've lived long enough to see reformers fail, too often, and people revert to type—to greed, stultifying stupidity, and self-destruction despite all the brave words. I don't especially like the world I live in, but as it's the only one of which I have actual knowledge I have had to adapt myself, after my fashion. He opened the desk drawer with a small key and took out an envelope. "I did not give you a wedding present," he said.

"You gave Abby a portrait, Mr. Wallace, and her mother's jewels."

Wallace said, "This, however, is for you . . . to use as you see fit, in furthering your—ambitions."

Barry took the envelope and removed the check. It was sizable, worthy of respect or suspicion, depending on how you look at these things. He said, "This is more than generous. But I would prefer you made the contribution through your state or county chairman."

"It is not a contribution to a party," said Wallace. "It is for you to use, as I said before."

"You mean," asked Barry curiously, "that if I refuse, you wouldn't give it to the Finance Committee here?"

"Just that."

Barry put the check in the envelope and the envelope in his pocket. He thought, Nuts, a bribe. But what for, and why? They could use it. Hageney would jump out of his withered skin. His was not a rich district, nor fashionable.

He said, "I'll take it, then. Thanks very much."

Wallace said, "Perhaps it is just my way of admitting I was mistaken. . . . I believe you are making Abby very happy."

Barry said bluntly, "She would be—if not happier, at least less bewildered, if she knew why you had told her that her mother was insane, and had committed suicide."

Wallace said regretfully, "I didn't say exactly that . . . she drew her own inferences."

Barry said, "You're darned right she did, as you intended her to. Would you tell me why?"

Wallace considered. Then he said, "Of course, it is simple enough. I did not want her to marry you, and was certain that there was no other way to stop her."

"So you lied?"

"Not to put too fine a point on it, yes. It was enough that Abby's mother was—neurotic. He looked at Barry levelly. "But only because she was unhappy. As you were with Abby when she saw Dr. Mason, you know that . . . She was not unhappy early in our marriage. She was quite content, with as much as I could give her. Later I was apparently unable to give her enough. She was not a very intelligent young woman. She wished to leave me, but circumstances prevented that. After Abby was born she fancied herself in love with Mason. I knew it, naturally. I watched her change. I saw her color, when the telephone rang or the mail was delivered. . . . I watched her go off on the restlessly solitary excursions. It seemed harmless enough, and it diverted her. To some extent it also diverted me, and relieved me of the somewhat oppressive affection she had entered on me before Abby's birth."

Barry said, "You're incredible, as I suppose you know."

"To you, yes," he rose. "I hope you and Abby will come here often. It is pleasant for me to have you here, and for Valentine. You have been wondering," he remarked, leaning against the desk, "while I was talking. You have been thinking that in middle life I made a failure of a marriage to a woman greatly my junior, and that now, practically moribund, I am repeating that error. But I do not think so. Valentine is very different from my first wife. She is extremely intelligent, in her way, and realistic. She is quite aware of her bargain."

He walked to the door and opened it and Barry followed. He thought, What a swine. The expression "Independent as a hog on ice" occurred to him. It was a silly colloquialism and he had never been sure what it meant, but it suited his father-in-law.

The check burned in his pocket. In the train, he told Abby exactly what her father had said. She listened without comment, and he asked anxiously, "I shouldn't have taken it, should I?"

"Why not?" asked Abby. "If it's his way of making amends. It isn't a very good way, but you can make it so."

"The end, if not the means?" She smiled at her. "But I don't think that was his motive. He is trying either to buy me or to disarm me. I don't know which. And certainly he was frank enough about the whole situation."

She said, "That would disarm you, too. Did it?"

"Heck, no. When I think of what he tried to do to you—to us . . ."

She said, "Let's not talk about it any more. She put her hand in his. "He can't hurt us now."

As the train rocked through the autumnal country, the smell of wood smoke beyond its windows, the trees now in darkness which, by daylight, burned, he said abstractedly, "Abby, it wasn't just that he didn't want you to marry me. He didn't want you to marry anyone . . . not even Emerson."

She said, "He said that when he was a child. He said that when he was a child, in which she had dismissed her father, everyone, and looked herself and Barry into it as if it were a room. She said, "He wouldn't have minded Craig—much."

"I'm not so sure," said Barry. "Well, skip it. From now on in he'll have his hands full with Val, or I'm not so sharp as I used to be."

"Why?"

"Maybe not now," he said; "she's a smart little dish. But later. You don't think she's going to be content with the sort of admiration he gives a painting? and a minor painting at that, I dare say."

Abby said, "He doesn't seem to mind other people admiring her. Her friends mean. At least he doesn't show it."

Barry grinned. "Tramping through the gallery," he said, "drinking his liquor, making passes at his wife?"

"Well, not actually," Abby argued.

"Val's more attractive to most of her male acquaintances," said Barry. "Now that she's married. Safer, more fun, no strings. Now that she is not only married, but has money and a husband who, in his brutal estimate of value given and received, couldn't possibly rate. Give her a couple of years, and I don't think your father will be as happy about the whole thing. Not that she won't be disheartened."

Abby said, "You know a lot about Val, don't you?"

He said, "Not very much. I used to wonder . . . she has a pretty warm exterior. You ask yourself, 'What's cooking?' and you think you know. Yet, I've never been sure."

He laughed. He added, "And won't be now."

Abby looked at him thoughtfully. He was crowded, but they might have been alone in it. She asked, "You aren't wishing you could find out, by any chance?"

He said, "Nope. I have enough trouble with you. You see, he said, smiling, "about you—I AM sure."

He watched her color rise, and laughed again. He was a happy man, in a train taking him back to work and his own place, with his wife beside him. He looked forward to the pattern of his life. After election the pace might slacken, but he still had his job to do, his studies and his friends. He thought, without regret, I don't suppose we will be going to Fairton much, this winter. He was mistaken.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

PRETTY EXPENSIVE FUN

NOBODY LIKES to sit there like a bump on a log while the opponents furnish all the action. There is always a temptation to butt in with some kind of a bid, just for the fun of it, if the other fellows are bidding their way to a high contract. This is especially tempting if one of the bids along the way happens to be a suit in which you hold a long string of cards. Then the most fun is just to double, with the idea that they will slip into something else. But that can be pretty expensive fun.

Carl Palm Speaker At Garden Club Meeting

Plans Made For Pumpkin Show Exhibits

Carl Palm who was stationed in England and France during World War II was the speaker when the Pickaway Garden Club met at the home of Mrs. George Bentley, North Court street, Friday evening.

Mrs. Blanche Motachman, president, opened the meeting by reading a poem "Autumn" written by Mrs. Lula Erick. During the business hour Mrs. Motachman announced the chrysanthemum show at the City building in Columbus October 12-13-14. It is open to the public.

Flower show for the Pumpkin Show was discussed and final arrangements made. The exhibit committee, Florence Dunton, Mrs. James Moffitt, Miss Mary Heffner, Mrs. Charles Smith and Winifred Parrett will be in charge with appointed members to assist. Mrs. Lewis Sharp was received as a new member at this meeting and Mrs. Motachman announced that the club now has a paid membership of 55.

Mrs. Loring Evans, program chairman, introduced the speaker, who talked on flowers of England and France.

In his talk he said England held to most of the old traditions. The flower gardens are all in front of the houses, are laid out in plots and surrounded by either high walls or shrubbery. The buses of that country were made with an upper deck and in traveling around allowed the passengers to look over the walls into the gardens. The herb garden was also in the front with shrubbery dividing the flowers and herbs. A number of the houses have thatched roofs. Money-suckle vines grow over many of the front doors, making a very picturesque sight.

He said flowers are grown in profusion, roses were mostly pink and a very common climber. There are great fields of red poppies. While in England he visited a castle said to be 800 years old. The hedge around this castle is about 500 years old growing about 12 feet tall and eight feet thick. He said the vegetables grown were very much smaller than the ones grown in this country and were grown in green houses. Mr. Palm said that France had very few flowers due to being so badly torn up by bombs, however there were beautiful tree roses. Where mums were grown they could be bought for about 20 cents a dozen.

While he was in Scotland he visited many of the gardens. He saw Isaac Newton apple tree, also the Sherwood forest. He also viewed many of the old castles and had the privilege of playing the organ in some of the older churches.

Mr. Palm answered many questions for the interested group bringing out a wealth of information. Arrangements were brought to the club and after they were judged, Mrs. James Carpenter received the prize for best arrangement of one flower and foliage. Mrs. Eli Roper, first prize for best vase of one kind of flowers.

Rosemary Mast was a guest of the club. After the meeting the hostess, Mrs. Bentley served refreshments. She was assisted by Mrs. C. P. Heiskell, Mrs. W. C. Watson, Mrs. John Mast, Mrs. E. O. Crites and Mrs. Robert Denman.

Ladies Aid society of the Church of the Brethren holds its monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Virginia Cupp, South Washington street. The session opened with group singing of "What A Friend We Have In Jesus". Mrs. Daisy Dumm read the scripture and offered prayer.

New officers were elected and it was decided to change the meeting date to the third Tuesday of each month.

Mrs. Emma Essick and Mrs. Laura Smith were on the refreshment committee. The next meeting will be held at Mrs. Essick's home on East Mound street.

Monroe township school and community club met Thursday evening in the school auditorium with Mrs. Francis Furniss, president, in charge. Group singing of "America" opened the meeting and was followed by the Lord's Prayer.

After the business session committees were appointed for the year and it was announced that 4-H achievement program will be held at the next meeting on November 7.

Kenneth Christy, superintendent, introduced the teachers and a reception was held in their honor. Refreshments were served from a decorated table in the dining room.

Paul's Background and Early Life

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Oct. 6 is Acts 21:39; 22:3, 27-28; 26:4-5; Philippians 3:5-6, the Memory Verse being Psalm 92:4, "Thou, Jehovah, hast made me glad.")

THIS LESSON begins a new series on the life and letters of the Apostle Paul, called by one commentator, "the greatest Christian that ever lived on this earth." He took the leading part in the shaping of the early Christian church, and virtually made it the world religion. It is today by carrying the message to the Gentiles as well as to the Jews, and accepting them on equal terms with the Jews in the fellowship.

Even less is known of the early life of Paul than that of his Master, Jesus. What little we know is through his own speeches and letters. We do not even know the names of his father and mother.

His first speech, which we quote and which gives us some information on his earlier life, was made in Jerusalem. He had been warned not to go to Jerusalem, because the people there were stirred up against him and meant to do him harm.

However, Paul was no coward, and when he felt his duty called him to that city he went. He went to the temple, and while he was in this area Jews from Asia saw him and cried out that this was the man who was everywhere teaching things contrary to the Mosaic law. He would surely have been killed then and there, but the Roman soldiers, who were stationed about to prevent just such violent acts, rescued him.

Paul Speaks Greek
As he was about to be taken into the castle by the chief captain, Paul spoke to him in Greek, to the amazement of the captain, and asked that he might be allowed to speak to the people who were packed into the temple area, below him. The captain had thought Paul was an Egyptian, but Paul said, "I am a man which am a Jew of Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, a citizen of no mean city; and I beseech thee, suffer me to speak unto the people."

The captain gave him leave to speak, and Paul held up his hand to the people and addressed the mob amid a great silence. "I am verily a man which am a Jew, born in Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, yet brought up in this city at the feet of Gamaliel, and taught according to the perfect manner of the law of the fathers, and was zealous toward God, as ye all are this day."

The city of Tarsus was one where "the institutions best and most completely united the oriental and western character; it was more successful than any other of the great cities of that time in producing an amalgamating society," writes W. M. Ramsay.

F. W. Farrar writes that it was from Tarsus that the vast masses of timber hewn in the forests of Taurus, were floated down the river to the Mediterranean dock yards; it was here that the vessels were unladen which brought to Asia the treasures of Europe. Gamaliel, Paul's teacher, was the son of Simon and grandson of Hillel. He encouraged his pupils to study Greek literature, and his teaching was toward a broader and more spiritual interpretation of the Mosaic law, and encouraged the Jews toward friendly intercourse with foreigners, for instance, allowing poor strangers equal rights with Jews to the gleanings of corn, etc. He was held in great esteem.

One can understand that under the guidance of such a teacher, Paul gained the liberal attitude toward Gentiles, which made him the leader in carrying Jesus' message to them.

Paul Learns a Trade

We are told that Paul learned the trade of tent-maker, and that seems to some people to mean that his parents were poor. Every Jewish boy learned a trade, however, and that was no indication that they were in poor circumstances. His education was very good for that time, and much better than that of most of the apostles, who were mostly poor, unlettered men. He started the study of the scriptures at the age of six, had a profound knowledge of the Old Testament scriptures, and his letters show him to be a scholar. He says of himself, "after the strictest sect of our religion, I lived as a Pharisee."

The mob was not appeased by Paul's speech and the Romans ordered him to be scourged. Paul said it was not lawful to scourge a Roman citizen, and the chief captain came to him and said, "Tell me, art thou a Roman?" He said, "Yes."

And the chief captain answered, With a great sum obtained I this freedom. And Paul said, But I was free born."

He was not scourged, and eventually was brought before Agrippa, Roman ruler. As a Pharisee high in the councils of the church, Paul had been zealous in persecuting the Christians, and was, in fact, present and at least an onlooker when Stephen, the first martyr, was stoned to death. All his life he was haunted by his early sins, but even the fact that he had persecuted Christians and, in fact, all his training and work before his conversion, made him later the very one to carry on God's work in the world. He, indeed, fulfilled his mission.

'CHRIST UNIFIER OF MEN' SERMON TOPIC SUNDAY

"Christ, the Unifier of Men" is the subject which the pastor of Calvary Evangelical church has chosen for his sermon on this Sunday of World-Wide Communion.

The Rev. James A. Herbst says: "As Christians throughout the world bow in this universal celebration we are reminded of the fact that only in Christ is such unity of spirit and action possible. As Paul has said in Ephesians 2:14, Christ breaks down all center walls of partition between groups of men and also between men and God. He then becomes the great unifier of all life."

The special music of the morning will be an anthem by the choir entitled, "Teach Me Thy Way". The sacrament of Holy Communion will also be celebrated in this morning service. In the afternoon the pastor will visit all of the shut-ins of the church and administer the sacrament to them.

The topic of the Sunday evening sermon will be "The Conflict of New and Old". This is the first of a series of Sunday evening sermons entitled, "Preaching from the Parables."

TEAMS READY TO OPEN SERIES BEFORE 34,000

Capacity Crowd To Watch Red Sox And Cards Play In St. Louis

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 5.—The Boston Red Sox and the St. Louis Cardinals tuned up their seige guns today for the opening game of the 1946 World Series with a pair of "twenty-gamers" expected to draw the pitching assignments tomorrow.

Neither Joe Cronin, pilot of the American League flag winners, nor Eddie Dyer of the Red Birds would come out definitely with their starting pitchers. But indications pointed to big Tex Hughson and lanky Howie Pollet as the fellows who will be on the firing line when this delayed series finally gets underway at Sportsman's Park tomorrow. Both Cronin and Dyer promised to name their starting pitchers after their workouts today.

Should Pollet's back muscles, painfully torn during the stretch drive which brought the Cardinals the National League pennant in a playoff with the Brooklyn Dodgers, be back in shape, Dyer was expected to call upon his 21-game winner in an effort to get the Cardinals off on the right foot.

The alternative seemed to be Harry (The Cat) Brecheen, another southpaw ace who is sure to see service during the series.

Cronin had no worries along the pitching line. He could shoot with either Hughson, Dave Ferriss or Mickey Harris, all of whom have been resting and waiting for this chance to give the Red Sox a winning start toward another world championship.

Hughson won 20 games as the Red Sox coasted to the American League pennant and was Cronin's clutch pitcher all season long, just as Pollet was the fellow upon whom Dyer depended when the going was the roughest.

While the Cardinal pitching staff presented a problem, there was no question about the rest of the Red Birds' lineup. Both Ted Williams, recovering from the elbow injury he suffered early this week when hit by a pitch in a practice game, and Dom DiMaggio were listed to start in the Red Sox outfield. Williams said he was ready and DiMaggio said that the sore thumb which kept him out of the watchful-waiting series against the American League all stars had responded to treatment.

The forecast was for a warm World Series opener with possible occasional showers.

A capacity crowd of 34,000 was assured for Sportsman's Park for the first game of the delayed classic.

The Red Sox were favored at 7 to 20 to win the series and 5 to 11 to take the first game regardless of the pitching nominees.

It was a typical World Series setting. All reserved seats had been sold and scalpers were asking up to $25 each for a ticket. Hotel space was at such a premium that newspapermen were housed in show rooms and one industrial firm had gone so far as to rent a river packet to house its customers and employees during the series games.

MONTEAL WINS SERIES
MONTEAL, Oct. 5.—Montreal today planned civic celebration of its first little World Series championship, and heroes of the city were Manager Clay Hopper, second baseman Jackie Robinson, and veteran pitcher Curt Davis, whose 2 to 0 triumph over Louisville last night ended the series.

Meat was scarce everywhere but at the high school "hot dog" stand Friday night when the game was over there were still a lot of "dogs" left and they were sold at bargain prices.

SOX AND CARDS LED LEAGUES FIGURES PROVE

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Stan Musial of the Cardinals dropped two points in the two-game playoff with the Dodgers, but still finished with .365, twelve points over the American League batting leader, Mickey Vernon of Washington, and 28 points better than John Mize of the Giants, second in the National League.

Unofficial figures released today showed that both league champions—the Red Sox and Cardinals—led in batting, too. Boston batted .272 as a team and the Cards .242. Both also were fielding champions—Boston with .977 and St. Louis with .979.

Hank Greenberg of Detroit hit the most home runs, 44, and Enos Slaughter of the Cardinals was the runs-batted-in leader with 130. Ralph Kiner of Pittsburgh led his league in homers with 23. Greenberg led AL runs-batted-in with 162.

Ted Williams of the Red Sox led in runs scored with 142, and Musial's 2.8 hits topped that department.

Pete Reiser of Brooklyn stole the most bases, 34, and George Case of Cleveland stole 29, the sixth time Case has led the American League.

Dave Ferriss of the Red Sox had the best pitching percentage, an .806 compiled on 25 victories and six losses. Hal Newhouser and Bob Feller scored the most victories, 26, but Feller lost 15 and the Detroit lefty dropped only nine. Phil Marchildon, Dick Fowler and Luther Knerr of the Athletics tied for the most pitching losses with 16 in the American League and Dave Koslo of the Giants lost 19 games in the National League.

Hints on Etiquette

Don't ask impertinent personal questions of your hostess which you would resent if they were asked of you.

Today's Horoscope

A birthday anniversary today means that you are impulsive, quick-tempered, but you have, nevertheless, a strong character, forceful and compelling. You love nature, especially water sports. You are fortunate in having many dear friends, and will have a very pleasant home life. Don't seek patronage, customers or favors. A short business trip may be necessary, so be ready. Chores in the home are likely to be burdensome. Parents or relatives may make decisive moves. Pause for a moment to count your blessings. Seek new acquaintances, adventure and stimulation.

Horoscope for Sunday

You are energetic and competent, and have considerable mechanical ability. You enter into things wholeheartedly and go through with your best efforts. You are respected and admired by all who know you. If you marry young, you will be happy and have an ideal married life. A serious talk with a friend may put your financial set-up on a solid basis. Discuss plans to make alterations in the home, or to redecorate or refurbish it in part. The evening promises little out of the usual. The night will be quiet.

National 'Employ Physically Handicapped Week' Observed Here

EFFORTS MADE TO GET JOBS FOR CRIPPLED

Proclamations Urge Public To Help In Drive To Aid Handicapped

Circleville and Pickaway county will join in the observance of National Employ the Physically Handicapped week, which begins Sunday.

The U. S. Employment Service in Circleville along with other USES offices throughout the nation announced Saturday that a determined effort will be put forth to find suitable jobs for physically handicapped workers. The effort has the approval of the U. S. Department of Labor in Washington.

Official proclamations appealing for the cooperation of all citizens in order to make the observance of National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week a success have been issued by President Truman, Governor Frank J. Lausche, and Mayor Ben H. Gordon.

It has been pointed out that the campaign to provide jobs for partially disabled war veterans has been lagging recently. A national survey has disclosed that approximately 250,000 of such veterans are now seeking jobs, and a bulletin issued by the National Association of Manufacturers says the situation reveals "a need for a different concept on the part of many employers as to what actually constitutes an on-the-job handicap, a fuller acceptance of the fact that a disability is not necessarily an occupational handicap, and a stronger determination to fit jobs to abilities, not to disabilities."

The Circleville USES office said:

"In this community there are men and women who are commonly referred to as handicapped persons. They have varying degrees of disabilities. Some of them are veterans of one or both world wars. Others are persons who have suffered disabilities in accidents. Some are victims of disease or injuries at birth. Many of the world's great men and women have been handicapped—and some of them have towered above their more fortunate neighbors. The disabled have included presidents and lawmakers.

"They have embraced authors, poets, lecturers, inventors and composers. They have included people who, in shops, offices, fields and factories, do all kinds of work to earn their living. Steinmetz was a giant in the field of invention. His employer, conscious of his potentialities, paid no heed to his disability. As a result the world gained splendid achievements from this electrical wizard who was handicapped from birth. His employers knew it was good business to employ Steinmetz.

"There are in this community handicapped persons who—while not geniuses—can mean more production at a machine, a desk, or in a store. Your USES office makes it a business to know these things here the employers will find available workers with skill and training to meet every job demand. It should be remembered that handicapped workers are safer workers, are absent from the job less than non-handicapped persons, are often more efficient workers than the non-handicapped, and are workers who stay on the job."

FLAT TIRE IN WRONG PLACE

NASHUA, N. H. (U.P.)—Arthur W. Leblanc thought he had trouble when a new tire on his automobile went flat, but it was only a starter. Leblanc had to leap for his life as an express train crashed into the car, scooping it in a crumpled mass from the railroad crossing on which he had parked.

PICKAWAY MEN APPLYING FOR 'AMPUTEE' AUTOS

Several men from Pickaway county have already applied for automobiles under the Veterans Administration's new plan of granting $1600 to veterans who have lost the use of one or both legs. It was reported today. The local V A representative, R. W. Beoddy has received application blanks and can now handle the Pickaway county veterans eligible for these benefits.

Mr. Beoddy said Friday, during his weekly visit to Circleville, that "a fellow doesn't have to have a limb off to get a car. Any one who has lost the use of his leg without having an amputation is eligible to apply for this benefit," he said.

The V A representative outlined the main provisions of the newest benefit to amputees and those who have lost the use of one or both legs. They are as follows:

A car cannot exceed $1600 in price, the allowance can be used to purchase trucks, jeeps, station wagons, tractors, and other conveyances with V A approval. The maximum $1600 allowed has to include the cost of any special attachments. State Highway patrolmen have to approve the attachments. If the vehicle costs less than $1600, the remainder of that amount can be used for accessories. The vehicle can be purchased from anyone of the veterans choice.

Pickaway county men who may be eligible to apply should see Mr. Beoddy any Friday from 9 to 4 at the Veterans Service Center in the basement of the court house.

NEWS Behind the NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

Some information from the electoral feedboxes, however, suggests Kelly may have had something to do with national chairman Hannegan bringing not only Wallace but Senator Pepper back into the list of official speakers with glue still fresh and running from them. Wallace has always been characterized generally here as a mystic, a rather innocent one between elections, but Pepper is strictly paprika. The color shows through.

Now the Demoside of the story (and I am telling the inside of only this one today) is the familiar tale that the Communists do not amount to much but their vote may come in handy. Pepper and Wallace, they say, are being held out to the Communistic element as two cakes of sugar (the mix-up of metaphors in this yarn is not mine but a proper contrast between objectivity and the viewpoint of the politics involved). You may recall Pepper was roundly applauded by the Communists when Wallace was booed, and he could not be anything but Communist sugar-bait in this situation because he has no organization in Florida which means anything to the Democratic command, but lately has been rather weak there (few Floridians talk much about his antics, being too busy trying to make more money) and even if he had an organization, his state is not in doubt in this election and therefore his support at home means nothing to the administration. Indeed, Florida will elect a new and better senator Holland (former governor) who is anything but pro-Pepper. The explanation of Pepper's inclusion, therefore, is that he is not up for election this year, but has four more years to run in office, which gives him leeway to advocate for nearly anything, including Russia, without fear of immediate retribution.

On the senate side, the Demos have a majority of 8 (lineup 56 Demos, 39 Repubs, 1 Progressive;) and Republicans need 9 more seats to win. Thus, only a Republican sweep could gain them the upper house—a possibility which rests considerably upon whether the unions do as the Democratic leaders now say and expect they will.

WE HAVE OUR PROBLEMS, TOO

We are facing the same difficulties that any other business faces today, plus some that are peculiar to the telephone business. We may have a telephone instrument in stock but are unable to install it because we are short of wire, cable, switchboard equipment, or some of the other miscellaneous equipment needed for the installation. We are receiving some equipment, but on a sporadic basis and only in small quantities. We are putting the equipment we do receive to the best possible use, and are installing telephones according to their priority rating.
